commission appeared displeased when they learned that such firms as Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and J. and W. Seligman & Co. had not been taken into counsel by the bankers here handling the negotiations. And it is gathered that no time will be lost in inviting every responsible banking house to

It can be stated authoritatively that nearly every so-called German banking firm in New York city is much less rabid than is popularly supposed. The Lusitaria incident angered many of them.

Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

Take Kuhn, Loeb & Co., for exemple. Jacob H. Schiff, the veteran head of the firm, while naturally proGerman in his rympathics, is much more pro-American. His son, Mortimer L. Schiff has had close association with England of which country Otto H. Kahn, another member of the firm, is a subject.

J. and W. Seligman, it is learned, are not to be classed as strongly favoring Germany, while the partners of Goldman, Sachs & Co. and Heidelbach, Ickelheimer & Co. represent both sides of the warring nations.

All these firms and others are understood to take the view that the first concern of the United States must be to foster its own commerce. Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

must be to foster its own commerce, no matter who may be benefited.

Basil P. Blackett, a member of the commission, when told that no promient German-American financiers had attended the reception in the Morgan library and that some resentment was felt, replied:

"It is unfortunate if any impression

"I don't know who is responsible for inviing those who attended the meeting in Mr. Morgan's library."

Hill to Schiff.

Hill to Schiff.

James J. Hill, immediately after his visit to the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., went to see Mr. Schiff at Kuhn, Loeb & Co.'s offices, where they discussed the loan. Mr. Hill, after the talk, merely said:

"Mr. Schiff is a very old friend and I had not seen him for a long time."

Mr. Schiff, following his invariable rule, would not be interviewed.

Mr. Hill's vigorous plea that the United States must in its own interest facilitate the raising of funds to pay facilitate the raising of funds to pay for American goods, has had a marked impression not only in New York, where there is little serious op-position to the loan, but in the middle west, where Mr. Hill carries great influence and where pro-German senti-ment is prevalent. Regret is expressed in many financial circles that the billion dollar loan has been made to appear very much a matter between J. P. Morgan & Co., and the official visitors.

All America Will Profit. Said one authority: The money is to stay in America. It is to go to American labor, American farmers and American business men. Politics have nothing to do with it. Even bankers having German sympathies take this view. There is not one of them but will put the welfare of the United States before any other consideration. And this loan beyond question will benefit this country. That it will enable England to get supplies here is only a secondary consideration."

It can be stated definitely that no responsible opposition to the loan will come from any high financial sources in New York City.

Inquiries at the National City Bank as to whether it had met any objections to its participating in the proposed transaction brought the statement that not one of the institution's 2.500 corresponding banks scattered throughout the country had raised the slightest objection; instead many encouraging letters had been received.

Kansas avenue and Quincy street, has been destroyed, after remaining there for more than half a century unmolested by the progress of time.

An automobile early this week was backing out of a garage and ran into the white pine tree which was broken by the force of the collision. Now the tree has been carried away.

The white pine is the last of a group of old trees which have been in that portion of Topeka for many years. The others were cedars. That section of the city is an old one and the trees were planted there shortly after the founding of Topeka. The cedars gradually disappeared and for the past ten years the pine has remained alone.
